Twenty Third Sunday in Ordinary Time
September 10, 2017

“You shall love your neighbor as yourself. Love does no evil to the neighbor; hence, love is the fulfillment of the law.”

These words from St. Paul’s letter to the Romans in our second reading today have a powerful message as our entire country and the world see the unbelievable disaster in southeast Texas and Louisiana. Throughout the ordeal of Hurricane Harvey, there have been amazing stories of courage and sacrifice as many have reached out to help their neighbors.

I want to introduce you to Jim McIngvale. He owns two furniture stores in Houston Texas. On the second day of the Hurricane, Mack, as he is known, welcomed hundreds of people looking for refuge into his Gallery Furniture Stores. He also sent out trucks in the flood looking for those in need of help.

“I’m worried about these people. I’m worried about the business; I’m worried about the community.” He said.

He opened his stores, not for business, but to provide shelter and food for those in need.

He said, “We can afford this and what we can’t afford is to cause these people to lose hope, we got to give them hope. This is what my parents would have done.”

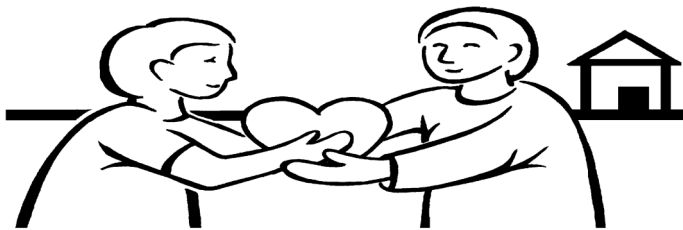

Mack’s history of community service would have made his parents proud. Each Christmas his business has provided homes full of furniture for families in need. He also donates his furniture to make over teachers lounges in area schools “Mattress Mack” as he is known in his advertisements has done this before. Twelve years ago when Hurricane Katrina hit he welcomed evacuees in the same manner as with this disaster. Some of those Katrina victims stayed in Houston, and he has hired some to work in his stores.

This example of helping our neighbor is being played out in many places, and there are numerous heroes responding to the needs of others. I think we can recognize the humanity of human beings in times of crisis.

As we pray for those in need let us remember our own call to reach out to our neighbors. There is no need for a catastrophe, there is only taking a few minutes to say a kind word; or to visit a sick friend. We can all do that.

God Bless you, Deacon Nick
