A Little Song of Faith: The Hymn Hidden in 2nd Timothy

At the end of today's New Testament reading from Paul's 2nd letter to Timothy there is a little gem. Paul repeats a "saying":

"This saying is trustworthy:
If we have died with him we shall also live with him;
if we persevere we shall also reign with him.
But if we deny him he will deny us.
If we are unfaithful he remains faithful, for he cannot deny himself.

Many scholars see this, (2 Timothy 2:11–13) as a compact creedal hymn embedded in Paul's letter. It was a short creed that was theologically dense and could be recited or sung. What gives it away is that Paul begins by calling it a "saying", "This saying is trustworthy," which in his pastoral letters often introduces a fixed, memorizable proclamation. The lines fall into rhythmic couplets (die/live; endure/reign; deny/deny; faithless/faithful), the kind of balanced parallelism that aids communal recitation. In other words, Paul is not improvising. He is quoting something Timothy and his community already knew by heart.

But, what does that tell us? First, Paul is writing to Timothy in the AD60s, only 30 years after the Crucifixion and even at this early stage, the Church expressed her faith in stable, sing-able forms. In Paul's day, most Christians could not read but they could carry the Gospel in their memory through hymns and creeds. These served several purposes. They were catechetical, distilling the essentials for both converts and believers; they were liturgical, giving the assembly a shared language of praise and promise; and they were boundary-setting, marking out what counted as apostolic faith over against rival gospels.

We can see the pattern elsewhere in Paul. The soaring poem of Philippians 2:6–11 ("though he was in the form of God, [he] did not regard equality with God something to be grasped.") also reads like a pre-existing hymn to Christ's descent and exaltation. Colossians 1:15–20 ("He is the image of the invisible God. . .") is another likely hymn, proclaiming Christ as Creator and Reconciler. 1 Timothy 3:16 ("He was manifested in the flesh. . .") compresses the mystery of Christ into a six-line chant. And Paul explicitly appeals to transmitted formulas: "I delivered to you what I received. . .that Christ died for our sins. . . that he was buried. . . that he was raised..." (1 Cor 15:3–5). That is a creed in seed form.

The fragment in today's reading bears the mark of a baptismal catechesis. "If we have died with him" evokes Romans 6 where Paul speaks of the immersion of baptism as death with Christ; "we shall also live with him" points to resurrection life already tasted sacramentally, to be completed in glory. "If we endure, we shall also reign with him" speaks to perseverance under persecution; the Church sang hope into courage. "If we deny him, he will also deny us" is a sober warning that the public proclamation of our faith matters. And the final proclamation distills the very heart of the Gospel: "If we are faithless, he remains faithful, for he cannot deny himself." The community thus learned both the gravity of apostasy and the unshakeable fidelity of Christ.

So, Why hymns and creeds? Pope Benedict XVI often noted that the Church's earliest theology was prayed and sung before it was systematized: The Latin saying sums it nicely, "lex orandi, lex credendi", the law of prayer shapes the law of belief. In this sense, hymns are not ornament; they are vehicles of revelation. Scott Hahn and Brant Pitre emphasize how Paul's "tradition" language (paradidōmi/parelabon) situates these formulas within a living, covenantal handing-on, much like Israel's Shema. Bishop Barron frequently points to the hymn in Philippians as evidence that the earliest Christian worship already confessed Jesus in divine terms; high Christology, the firm belief that Christ was divine, was sung in the Mass, not, as modern critics claim, invented in later ecumenical councils.

Outside of Paul's letters, early witnesses confirm the same picture. The Roman historian, Pliny the Younger (c. AD 112) reports that Christians "sing hymns to Christ as to a god." The Didache, the first-century Christian manual of teaching, worship, and Church practice preserves fixed Eucharistic thanksgivings and a baptismal discipline that presumes memorized forms. Ignatius of Antioch (1st century) writes in cadences that sound like liturgical antiphons ("one physician, both flesh and spirit. . ."), while Irenaeus and Tertullian articulate the regula fidei, a rule of faith that summarizes Scripture's story and functions like a proto-creed. In the West this rule crystallized into what was known as the "Old Roman Symbol", the ancestor of the Apostles' Creed, used especially at baptism when candidates publicly proclaimed the faith.

In today's reading look at how the hymn trains the heart. It anchors identity ("we have died with him"), sets expectation ("we shall live, we shall reign"), warns against covenant infidelity ("deny, denied"), and finally rests everything on Christ's unwavering fidelity ("he remains faithful"). As Pope Benedict remarked, Christianity is not an idea but a body, and in that body faith becomes a shared rhythm, remembered in persecution, whispered at baptisms, echoed at funerals, and proclaimed every Lord's Day. The presence of such a hymn inside Paul's letter is a window into the living Church: Scripture and tradition already interwoven, creed serving liturgy, and liturgy shaping life.

The "trustworthy saying" of today's reading is a miniature Paschal creed. It shows that from the beginning Christians learned the faith by singing it, guarded the faith by confessing it, and lived the faith by enduring in it; confident that the One they praised would be faithful to the end.

Join the ROSARY FOR AMERICA on Saturday, October 11 at 12 p.m. at the Isidro Baca Memorial Park (across the street, south side of the Plaza). Sponsored by America Needs Fatima, with over 23,000 groups praying at noon on this day for our nation, this is the world's largest Rosary Rally Crusade!

It is presented by the Catholic Daughters of America, the Legion of Mary, and the Knights of Columbus of our parish. God bless you and God bless America!
